

Teachers work at the university.

I am not working this morning,
but I am working this afternoon.

Mechanics work on cars in shops.

The mechanic is working on my car right now.

I have worked at the University for two years.

The mechanic has worked on cars since he was 12.

I will have worked there for two years and two months after this month.

The mechanic will have fixed his 1000th car after fixing 5 more cars.

My car is number 995.

If I had not moved here, I would have been working in Arizona for 6 years now.

If I had not brought my car in, the mechanic might have fixed his 1000th car today.

I have been waiting for my car for two hours.

The mechanic has been working on my car for two hours.

I can work on some papers while I wait.

The mechanic says that he could be working on my car all afternoon.

I think that most of these papers will need to be worked on more.

If he does not finish soon, I could be late to work.

The mechanic asks me if my car has been worked on before.

Yes, my car was worked on this summer in Portland.

It has not been worked on since then.

He says the part they used won't work with the part he is putting in.

My car has already been being worked on for two hours now.

He says the car will not be fixed today.

I'm going to have to be able to drive to Portland this Sunday.

He says my car is working but it wouldn't be safe on long drives.

I should probably think about taking the bus.

My mechanic says that would be a good idea.
